Luxury comes in many forms. Depending on your tastes, you're just as likely to find it in a precision Swiss timepiece, a SoHo art gallery or a Tuscan wine cellar.

With that thought in mind, I invite you to explore the pages of Homes & Estates Magazine, purposefully redesigned to bring you more of the people, places and objects of enduring beauty that add to the richness of the luxury lifestyle.

Of course, we'll continue to showcase once-in-a-lifetime properties like a hidden Oahu gem perched on the slopes of Diamond Head, or the former Henry Clay Frick manor home occupying 14 pristine acres in the shadow of New York City. At the same time, we'll transport you beyond the enclaves of ultra-exclusive real estate to meet fascinating figures like Michael Bruno, the entrepreneur behind 1stdibs.com, the online marketplace that's reinvented the antique and fine design trade. We'll look under the hood at Maserati, the Italian exotic carmaker and exclusive partner of Previews, and marvel at a legacy that includes many of the world's finest touring machines. We'll even sit down with Chris Cortazzo, Malibu real estate agent to the stars and a man with his own celebrity past.

Now that you know what to expect from Coldwell Banker Previews International's Homes & Estates, we're confident you'll find something special to enjoy!

PARADISE

This acclaimed South Florida architectural marvel captivated a neighboring couple so much, that they bought it.

BY KEN WEINGARTNER

Wherever Ira Lampert and his wife Ieene look, the beauty of Golden Beach surrounds them. The fact that they enjoy these views from any room in their home makes it all the more special.

"You'd think we'd brought the tranquility and beauty of the outdoors and ocean into the house," says Ira Lampert of the couple's South Florida oceanfront estate. "The house is an architectural masterpiece. There's nothing like it in the world."

Constructed on the site of a residence once owned by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the estate at 219 Ocean Boulevard was designed by architect Carlos Zapata. It was the first single-family estate designed by Zapata, who went on to worldwide prominence for works that include Chicago's Soldier Field and New York's Cooper Square Hotel.

In 2004, the Lamperts' home was designated one of the 20 best commercial and residential properties in Miami by the Miami Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

"My favorite part of the design is the way the sunlight enters the house," says Zapata. "The big floating roof is hovering and shading a large skylight over the living room, allowing for indirect light to enter the center of the house from all directions. The translucent west wall filters the sun, inundating the central space, the living room and family room, with warm diffused light in the late afternoon. There are also a great number of skylights throughout the house bringing in light."

"The inspiration was the site itself, Golden Beach," adds the architect. "I opened the house to the water views and responded to the trajectory of the sun."

Listed by Coldwell Banker's Jill Hertzberg and Jill Eber, better known as "The Jills," the $13.5 million estate features the primary residence as well as a two-story guesthouse with a retractable roof that opens to expose an artist's studio and balcony overlooking the beach and ocean.

Constructed in 1994, the estate has been renovated and modernized over the years by the Lamperts.

The Lamperts, who lived on the ocean on the same street prior to purchasing the home in 2000, long admired the property.

"As we would walk down the beach, we would see this unique house. It always captivated us," says Lampert. "We would just stand there and stare at it."

The home's curved glass walls, glass ceilings and the white onyx glass wall overlook two koi ponds and a floating granite walkway. The angled design is complemented by a cantilevered floating staircase, which leads to a glass-enclosed second-floor bridge and family room overlooking the first-floor living room and connecting the north and south sides of the second floor.

"Some houses might have some large windows, or sliding glass doors, but you're in the confines of the house," says Lampert. "In our home you're not in the confines of the house. From almost every room you are viewing the landscapes and the ocean."

The home includes six bedrooms, seven full and two half baths, a media/theater room, fully equipped gym, European kitchen with breakfast area and formal dining room, and an exterior master bedroom balcony that overlooks the beach, ocean and landscaped grounds designed by Raymond Jungles.

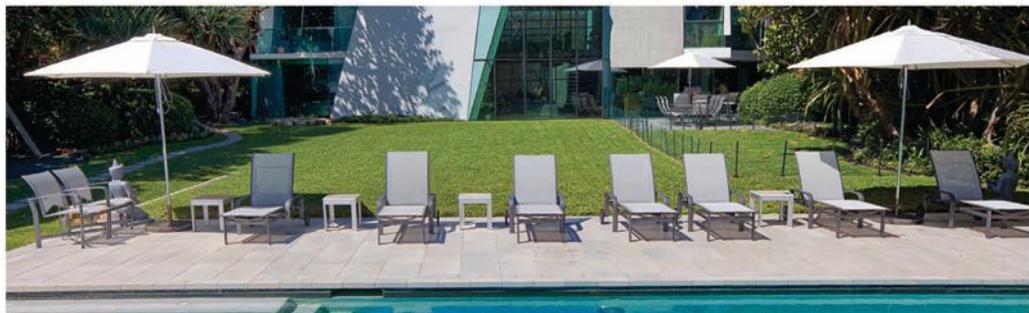

Other features include a four-car garage with cabinetry and workspace as well as an infinity-edge pool that visually connects to the private beach and ocean.

"We wake up with the sun and we're surrounded by nature," says Lampert. "It's like being in paradise."

COVER FEATURE

As the president of Previews International for Coldwell Banker NBT, Betty Graham is ultimately responsible for the buying and selling of the most luxurious homes on the planet.

President Coldwell Banker Previews International NRT

Even after three decades serving in the epicenter of the national luxury market, I still marvel at the exotic luxury sector's resilience. Today is no exception, with Coldwell Banker Previews International's $10 million and higher listings enjoying great energy. Coldwell Banker Previews agents across the country are reporting an influx of sales over $20 million. We don't need to look far for examples. The $150 million Spelling Manor, which recently sold for an undisclosed price, joined the ranks of other rarified sales this year, such as the rumored $100 million Silicon Valley estate.

The sale of these extremely rare properties not only emphasize the strength at the highest levels of the luxury market, but also underscore the importance of sophisticated communications platforms that reach the highest echelons of the affluent—whether they are 5 miles or 5,000 miles away. Thankfully, Coldwell Banker Previews continues to create high-quality print and digital publications that speak the language of today's luxury buyers. For example, with this issue we are debuting a new look for Previews Homes and Estates magazine, complete with new cover design, page layouts and improved editorial content. And Previews' all-digital Luxury from the Inside Out magazine has raised the bar for brand publishing by featuring exclusive interviews with tastemakers such as Michael Boudro, editor of Elle Décor; celebrity chef Todd English; world-renowned designer Jonathan Adler and actress Jane Seymour. New partnerships with 1stdibs.com and Maserati have also elevated Previews as a true luxury lifestyle brand, linking the world's finest real estate with the world of fine art, antiques, jewelry, clothing and automobiles.

THE LUXURY MARKET

EARLIER THIS YEAR, I HAD THE HONOR OF BEING ELEVATED TO PRESIDENT OF COLDWELL BANKER PREVIEWS INTERNATIONAL®, NRT AFTER SERVING SEVEN YEARS AS PRESIDENT OF COLDWELL BANKER RESIDENTIAL BROKERAGE IN GREATER LOS ANGELES. THESE LEADERSHIP POSITIONS HAVE GIVEN ME AN OPPORTUNITY TO WITNESS THE IMMENSE GROWTH AND MATURITY OF THE ULTRA LUXURY MARKET FROM A VERY UNIQUE VANTAGE POINT.

Few real estate companies today rival the Coldwell Banker Previews brand in sales, global reach or mastery of the luxury lifestyle. However, the real art of selling luxury real estate today rests in the hands of our fine Previews real estate agents, many of whom rank among the top in the world. The success of these extraordinary agents is a testament to how far the ultra affluent market has come in the last three decades—and where it's going in the next three.

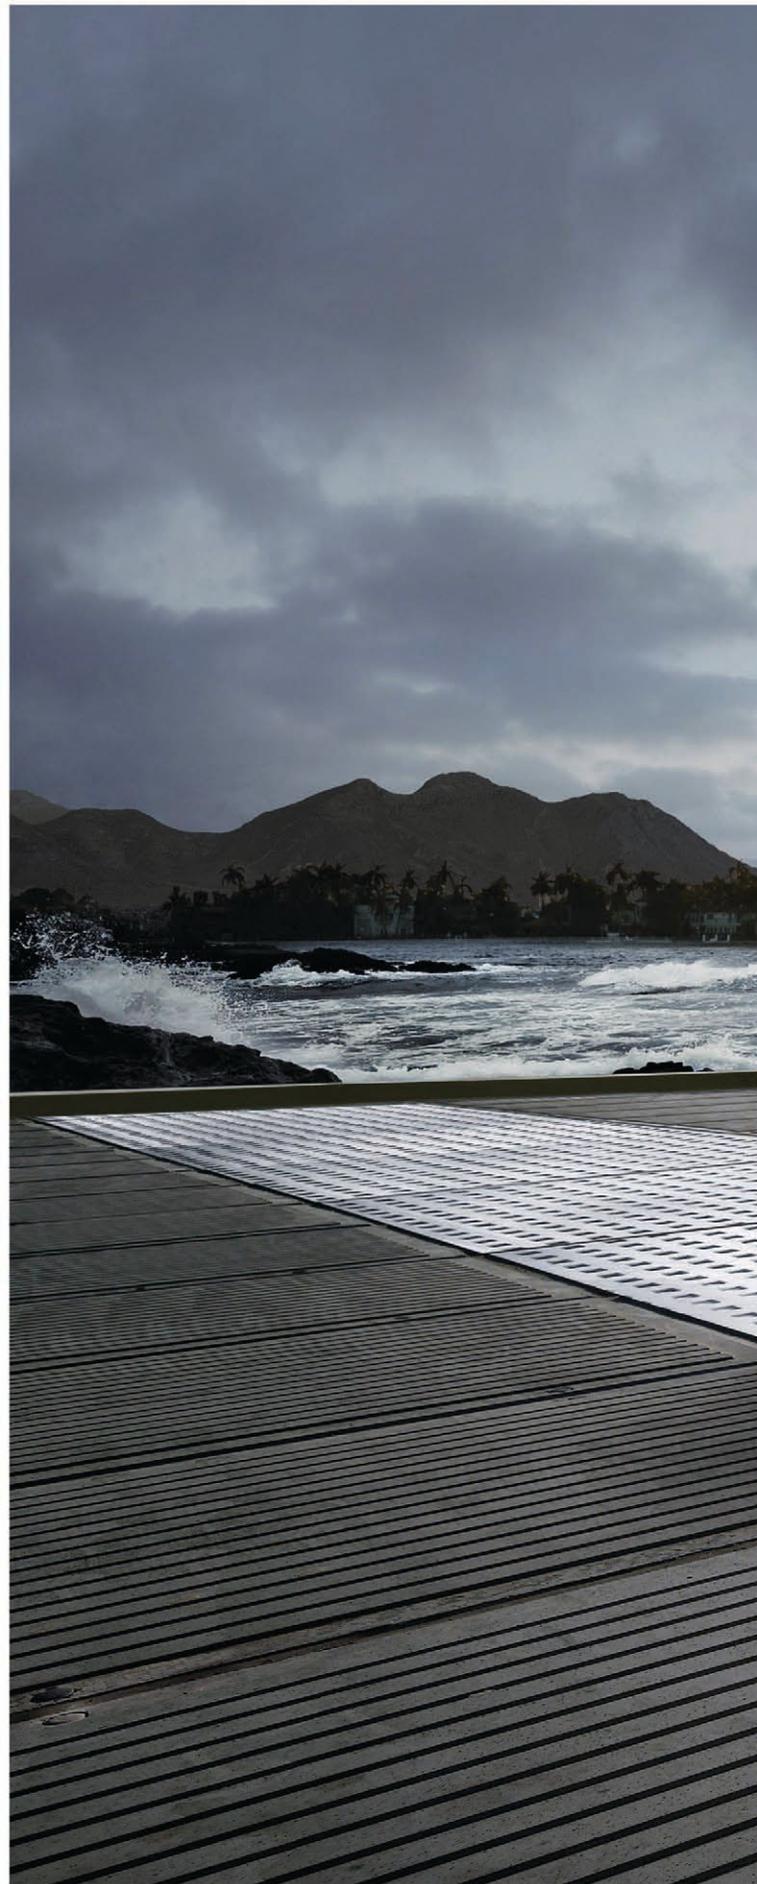

OF ALL THE EXCITING, GLAMOUROUS AND HISTORIC ITALIAN SPORTS CAR BRANDS, THIS NAMEPLATE MAY EMBODY THE MOST GRACE.

Think sleek, sexy bodylines. A supple, leather-lined interior. The glint of gleaming chrome metal trim. The sonorous rip of a high-winding thoroughbred powerplant, and a lyrical name ending in “i,” and the first great Italian marques that come to mind may be Ferrari or Lamborghini. And true enough, they qualify. But as an elite, boutique, carmaking enterprise, Maserati is older than both of them, and remains at the heart of Italy’s exotic carmaking mecca, which — along with the aforementioned — also includes Alfa Romeo, Pagani, DeTomaso, Lancia, and others.

Five of the six original Maserati brothers contributed to the company’s birth and its establishment as one of the world’s great sport/luxury automobile manufacturers. The company, founded in Bologna, originally produced automotive components, such as spark plugs and batteries, plus motorcycles. Born in 1914, and firmly entrenched, primarily as a racecar builder by the onset of World War II, Maserati moved to nearby Modena.

While most Maseratis are fast and sporty, the marque ultimately focuses on the conception and production of elegant grand touring machines; cars intended to convey an elite ownership quickly and safely with elegance and in style. They are by intent less extreme than the products of the other Italian exotic carmakers, and quite often owned by celebrities and bloodlined royalty. One particularly rare and exclusive model, the Maserati 5000GT, has been referred to as a "king among cars, and a car of kings" as many have been owned by kings, princes and shahs.

THE MAGIC OF MASERATI

Noted Maserati enthusiast and collector Doug Magnon was born and raised in Riverside, Calif., in the heart of West Coast road racing. "My father grew up here hot rodding and motorcycling with Dan Gurney and Skip Hudson, before they set off on their professional racing careers," Magnon recalls. "Later, I grew up with the families that ran Riverside International Raceway, the Richters and the Hords. It was a car crazy era and I dreamed of someday having a collection of sports cars.

"Had I been able to build a collection of the cars I wanted in my 20s, it would probably have been a mix of my favorites growing up: Porsches, Ferraris, Jaguars, et cetera. I knew of Maseratis then, but wasn't really familiar with the marque. By my mid-30s, I was finally able to start into a collection, and discovered my tastes had changed. I am not the flashy type, so edgy Lamborghinis and gold chains are not my style. A friend recommended I consider Maseratis. What I discovered really appealed. Of all the exotics of Modena, Italy, Maserati embraces elegant understatement."

Maserati is the only Italian car manufacturer to win the Indianapolis 500. Wilbur Shaw drove the Maserati 8 CTF to victory in 1939 and 1940, making him the first driver to win back-to-back Indy 500s.

Maserati's three-pronged spear logo has led to the nickname "Trident." Magnon eventually learned that Maseratis often were more expensive and better equipped than their Modenese competition and often sold to a higher level of clientele. He was intrigued by its history, and as his collection grew, he realized that building a vertical representation of production Maseratis was something unique. Says Magnon, "There are many Ferrari collectors out there, but it is rare to find a collection of the Tridents."

NEW TODAY, A CLASSIC TOMORROW

GranTurismo Convertible Sport

Not interested in collecting an older Maserati, but fancy a new one? Modena, Italy's oldest exotic luxury carmaker currently produces a tasty buffet of exciting models, based on two platforms. If you need a large, comfortable, decidedly Italian luxury sport sedan, consider one of the company's Quattroporte (meaning, literally, four port or four door) models. If you need seating for four but two doors are enough, and you desire a coupe or a convertible, the company has just released two new models worthy of your test drive and consideration.

One is the GranTurismo MC, which stands for Grand Touring, Maserati Corse. Its handbuilt, symphonic sounding, 4.7-liter V-8 spools out 444 horsepower, and is backed by a high-tech, smooth yet responsive six-speed automatic transmission. The elegant coupe body, designed by renowned Pininfarina of Turin, is muscular yet beautiful from any angle. The cabin is wrapped in an enticing combination of supple leather, plus carbon fiber and Alcantara suede trim. The GranTurismo MC embodies a high-tech cocktail of the latest active and passive safety features with superb electronic and infotainment systems.

Desire one of the world's most elegant tanning booths? Consider the GranTurismo Convertible Sport, nearly identical mechanically to the MC coupe mentioned above, but with a fully automatic folding cloth convertible top. Learn more at maserati.us.

IT'S GOOD TO BE KING

*CHRIS CORTAZZO BEGAN HIS CAREER
17 YEARS AGO WITH A CELEBRITY SALE.
IT DIDN'T TAKE HIM LONG TO BECOME 'THE KING OF MALIBU.'*

BY KEN WEINGARTNER

When it comes to experiencing all life has to offer, Chris Cortazzo possesses a spirit of wanderlust. When it comes to his job, however, there is no place like home.

Malibu is home. For Cortazzo, there is no finer place on earth. His passion for the area and knowledge of its charms and beauty led him to a career he never expected.

For a decade, Cortazzo has been the top real estate agent in Malibu, not to mention being named the No. 1 Coldwell Banker sales agent nationally and internationally in 2009 and 2010. Since the beginning of 2000, he has recorded more than $1.5 billion in closings.

He had no intentions of becoming "The King of Malibu," as he was dubbed on the Bravo television program "Million Dollar Listing." It was during a nearly three-year stint working as an assistant for renowned photographer Herb Ritts that the idea of a real estate career blossomed.

"Herb was a remarkable photographer and he photographed anyone and everyone who was famous," says Cortazzo, who is the Estates Director for the Malibu West

IN HIS WORDS

Q: WHO HAS BEEN THE BIGGEST INFLUENCES ON YOUR LIFE?

A: My mom [Patricia] and my dad [Vincent]. Unfortunately, I lost my dad 2-1/2 years ago, which has been devastating. But my brother [Daniel] and I came from a wonderful, very loving family. My parents' lives revolved around us. They really loved us and would do everything with us. I was very fortunate. I bought the home next door to my parents and I'd see them at least two or three times a day.

Q: YOU'RE INVOLVED WITH AN ANIMAL RESCUE, HOW DID THAT COME ABOUT?

A: I have a lot of rescued chickens and turkeys on my property. I believe in kindness to all living things. I'll rescue a bee out of a pool. It's so easy to be kind and takes so much energy to be mean.

Q: WERE YOU INVOLVED IN A LOT OF ACTIVITIES GROWING UP?

A: My dad and I would go free-diving after school and I've been surfing since I was 5. I was on the crew team in college and also got into acting. I did a one-act play and then I was in the musical "Guys and Dolls." I had five different roles, but I couldn't sing if my life depended on it.

Q: DO YOU ENJOY SEEKING NEW EXPERIENCES?

A: I love taking on new challenges. I'm like a gypsy because I like to change things up in my life — except for real estate. I've been in the business for over 17 years. It's the longest I've been in one place.

Q: WHAT DO YOU MOST ENJOY ABOUT WORKING IN REAL ESTATE?

A: I love being able to make people's dreams come true. It's so satisfying to be able to hand the keys to someone and know they're going to have all these wonderful experiences in their new home.

office of Coldwell Banker. "During the shoots, when people found out I was from Malibu, they would ask where they should live if they were going to move there. I knew all the intricacies of this special place and I got into placing people in Malibu. I put two and two together and decided I should go into real estate."

The connections Cortazzo made during his time with Ritts were beneficial. His first sale was in 1994 to actor Richard Gere for $5 million, and his first listing was for $8 million.

"It was great working with Herb and having that experience," says Cortazzo. "It was fun and I established so many important relationships with Hollywood. I'm not intimidated by anyone; people are people and I just see them for who they are. I love working with people.

"To me it's all about trust. When you travel in those circles it's so important that you maintain people's trust. Your business is built on referrals. If you do a good job and you're trustworthy, it's amazing how your career will unfold."

Cortazzo traveled the world while working for Ritts. Previously, he studied a year in Italy as a college student and spent time in Europe, Australia and New Zealand while modeling.

"No matter where I go, I love coming back to Malibu," says Cortazzo. "It truly has everything. I think it is the best place in the world to live."

A SITE TO BEHOLD

By marrying an age-old industry with modern technology, Michael Bruno brought “The Most Beautiful Things on Earth” to the web.

“By age 30, I’d renovated and sold six houses. I follow real estate obsessively and am always in the market.”

MICHAEL BRUNO is his own best customer. A self-confessed “non-techie” who loves “great old houses and the things in them,” he has spent a decade building 1stdibs, the world's premier online marketplace for antiques and design. But before assembling 1,200 of the globe's finest dealers in one remarkably easy-to-search place, before the expansion to other luxury categories (estate & fine jewelry; vintage couture & designer fashion; fine art), before millions of design aficionados flocked to the site, there was his first passion: real estate.

In the '90s, Bruno was a young San Francisco real estate broker, squiring Internet millionaires to the best properties in town. Driven by a desire to share in the boom, he bought the domain name 1stdibs.com in 1998, then sold the Pacific Heights home he'd lovingly restored and moved to Paris in search of his Internet inspiration. His first week there, he discovered the legendary Paris Flea Market, and decided to bring it to the world online. (He later moved back to New York in establishing the company.)

The idea was simple: apply a multiple listing service model to the high-end antiques category, making the finest inventory of pieces from the best dealers available to all online. That notion transformed the business by changing the way the design trade — and design-loving civilians — shopped for antiques. In 2010, 1stdibs dealers reported upwards of $500 million in sales.

The story comes full circle this Fall, as 1stdibs launches the latest addition to its portfolio: a search for fine homes. We caught up with the always-in-motion web pioneer and talked to him about his real estate addiction, his affinity for antiques and why his past, present and future are so intertwined.

“...WHETHER ONE OF OUR BEAUTIFUL PIECES SELLS TO A SERIOUS COLLECTOR OR A CONSUMER WHO SIMPLY FALLS IN LOVE WITH IT, WE SEE IT AS A CHANCE TO PRESERVE AN OBJECT OF BEAUTY FOR GENERATIONS TO COME.”

HOW DID YOU GET YOUR START IN REAL ESTATE?

I discovered the joys of selling real estate when I was 19. I was going to school at San Diego State, and working as part of a clean-up crew at a construction site in Rancho Santa Fe one summer. I would watch a fabulous car pull up, and an attractive woman would show the house to her glamorous clients. I found out how much those agents made and thought, ‘That’s what I want to do!’ So I quit school and got my real estate license and became the youngest person to ever sell real estate in La Jolla. I eventually moved to San Francisco, because I wanted a bigger pond.

WHERE DID THIS LOVE OF REAL ESTATE — AND PARTICULARLY “GREAT OLD HOUSES,” AS YOU CALL THEM — COME FROM?

I grew up in an English Tudor in Larchmont, New York, where there is a large stock of graceful old homes, so I’ve always loved old houses. I was a swimmer in high school and while swimming laps I would obsessively think about floorplans, and how I wanted my house to look when I was older.

IS IT TRUE YOU ONCE SOLD YOUR HOUSE WITH ALL ITS CONTENTS—DOWN TO THE FLATWARE?

The buyers were a lovely couple moving from London. They bought my San Francisco home furnished, and said to err on the side of leaving things. I walked out with just a rolling suitcase.

WHAT DO YOU LOVE MORE—SELLING HOUSES OR BUYING THEM? OR IS IT BUYING, RENOVATING, AND THEN SELLING THEM?

I’m a serial renovator; my friends say I’m happiest when under the chaos of construction. By age 30, I’d renovated and sold six houses. I follow real estate obsessively and am always in the market. Last month, the day after completing an overhaul of the entire second floor in my country house, I found out my bid on another property nearby was accepted. So here we go again.

1STDIBS SELLS ABOUT 6,000 ONE-OF-A-KIND ITEMS A MONTH. WHAT’S SPECIAL ABOUT OWNING A VINTAGE PIECE?

For me, what’s most special is that whether one of our beautiful pieces sells to a serious collector or a consumer who simply falls in love with it, we see it as a chance to preserve an object of beauty for generations to come. To me, that’s 1stdibs’ greatest contribution: to foster this sense of stewardship.

1STDIBS’ NEW SEARCH FOR FINE HOMES LAUNCHES THIS FALL. CONSIDERING YOUR BACKGROUND, IS THIS SOMETHING YOU’D ALWAYS HAD IN MIND?

Yes; it fits the lifestyle that our audience leads. Our audience buys big-ticket items on a regular basis, and cares about having a beautiful home. One of the most exciting aspects of the new search is we’re asking top designers and architects (who are all real estate junkies like me) to make “property picks”...to tell us what houses on the market catch their eye and why.

DO YOU COLLECT ANYTHING YOURSELF?

I was once asked this question in an interview with W magazine. I took a look around my house and realized I’d been collecting all sorts of animal-themed objects for years. Doesn’t it make you wonder — what are you collecting without knowing?

AS A REAL-ESTATE-BROKER-TURNED-WEB-PIONEER, WHAT REAL ESTATE SKILLS STILL COME IN HANDY TO THIS DAY?

I don’t know how handy it is, but I can instantly calculate six percent of anything!

ASIAN

VICTORIAN SOUTHPORT

BY SARAH BINDER

Even after an extensive, passion-driven, four-year renovation of his Southport, Conn., New England-style waterfront estate, one of homeowner Michael Sonnenfeldt's favorite aspects of the property is a fairly simple pleasure, albeit one that not many luxury homeowners get to experience. "The house has a sleeping porch on the second floor, which is quite rare, and I sleep out there frequently to the sound of the waves lapping on the beach," he says. "There is just nothing like it."

The tranquil sight of falling snowflakes melting into Long Island Sound, combined with Sonnenfeldt's appreciation for traditional Japanese culture, inspired the stone-and-shingle home's name, "First Snow on the Beach." "In Japan, there's something roughly equivalent to a European family crest — called a kamon," says Sonnenfeldt. "I playfully picked the kamon for 'first snow,' and the one that stands for 'beach,' and those symbols are embedded in the home's shutters and the property gate."

Shortly after purchasing the property in 2002, Sonnenfeldt created his own company to tackle one of his longstanding visions — a desire to blend authentic Japanese design influences and features into his already spectacular, historic estate on the sound. Sonnenfeldt traveled to Japan "half a dozen times" to collect materials and gather ideas, and he hired top-notch Japanese craftsmen and Italian architects to import materials and design and execute significant portions of the project, including a powder room adorned with hand-carved hummingbirds and cherry blossoms, and Italian cherry custom inlay flooring in the living, dining and family rooms. The team also retained many of the property's original, turn-of-the-century details from when it was first constructed in 1908 as a Dutch Colonial cottage on 200-plus feet of waterfront. The result is a sophisticated blend of modern style and amenities inside what Sonnenfeldt calls a "Dutch Colonial shell." Among the modern amenities is a tennis court, a sauna adjacent to the master bath, and a perfect ellipse/pure-sound dining room with an impressive built-in dining table for 18 people.

The nine-bedroom, eight- and one-half-bath residence is quite a novelty in Southport, which is known for its "extraordinary and beautiful collection of Victorian homes," Sonnenfeldt says.

Fine Japanese craftsmanship accentuates this Connecticut home, called "First Snow on the Beach."

Within First Snow on the Beach, you have spaces that look Japanese; you have spaces that look nautical; and you have spaces that look like a Dutch Colonial. These are all woven together through a common palette of color and details such as the molding, which has been completely replaced to instill harmony among the various aesthetics, he says.

Members of the Japanese royal family have visited the property and marveled at the quality of the craftsmanship and the authentic nods to their culture, including a Japanese garden with a meditation area. But at the end of the day, Sonnenfeldt and his team designed the property to be a year-round family residence that spares no comfort or amenity. "I have renovated numerous homes," he says, "but this was the jewel of 30 years of experience."

A OF WORLD ITS OWN

THE FORMER HENRY CLAY FRICK MANOR HOME IS 6 MILES FROM NYC, BUT FEELS WORLDS AWAY.

BY LAUREN VARGA KING

Richard Kurtz knew of the Frick Estate in Alpine, N.J., for some 30 years, but he never imaged it would become his — or even available. “I was very surprised,” says Kurtz when asked his reaction five years ago to the news that the entire 60-acre compound was being sold. “I thought it was a magnificent property and I would love to own it and develop it.”

Kurtz bought it and plans to do just that. And now, the former Henry Clay Frick II English manor — a main house and approximately 14-acre portion of the original 60 acres Kurtz purchased — is on the market for $28 million.

“The home is part of the former Frick family estate, which to me is a pedigree property,” says Kurtz. What makes it so exciting is you’re virtually 20 minutes from the heart of Manhattan and you drive on a country road to get there.”

The impeccably maintained manor home was originally built in 1942 and consists of 13,000 square feet, six bedrooms, seven baths, four fireplaces and palladium windows overlooking the green hills and English gardens that accent the property’s lush landscaping. For buyers in need of more space, plans exist to extend the home’s footprint, providing additional bedrooms and living space. Kurtz adds, “some people would want to tear it down and build new.”

Of course, whether the home is transformed or completely rebuilt, the grounds will remain the most desirable asset of the listing. “You’re countrified to the extent of deer, wild turkeys, swans on the pond, an aviary with some 30 various birds and even coyotes,” says Kurtz, whose grandchildren see the outdoor space as a haven for throwing a football, fishing or boating on the pond, and enjoying the swimming pool. “You have 14 acres to romp and play that is just the opposite of being in the city,” adds Kurtz.

As for a message to the future owners of the former Frick manor or homes on the 60 acres, Kurtz offers this: “I think the future will be one where people — my children, my grandchildren, everyone — will reflect on these 60 acres as being the finest properties in the United States. It’s a scene of regalness and beauty and I think there will be a legacy here.”

“You’re countrified to the extent of deer, wild turkeys, swans on the pond, an aviary with some 30 various birds and even coyotes.”

The expansive grounds also create a perfect backdrop for outdoor entertaining. Whether hosting a large gala, a garden party or a moonlight cocktail hour, the entire property is both graceful and rare.

In addition to the unmatched environment, which includes room for horses, a carriage house and staff quarters, the manor home and entire 60 acres are located in top-rated Alpine, N.J. “Alpine is a great community,” says Kurtz, who also speaks highly of the town’s elementary school.

COASTAL CONNECTION

The Mediterranean meets the Gulf of Mexico at this lavish home in Longboat Key, Florida.

BY ROGER GRODY

Located in Longboat Key, a strip of earth separating Sarasota Bay from the open sea on Florida's Gulf Coast, is this 5,047-square-foot Mediterranean estate. It has a Birdie Lane address in the Country Club Shores neighborhood — names inspired by the proximity of championship-caliber golf — but the water is what really shapes the local lifestyle.

Listing agent Judy Kepez-Hays, with Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate, underscores the remarkable quality of the home, reporting, "It's just magical from the moment you walk in.... The views are captivating and there's phenomenal attention to detail." With Sarasota Bay and skyline as its backyard, sunrises and sunsets as its backdrop, complete with frolicking dolphins, she believes it is well priced at $3.5 million.

The sellers are Beverly and Townsend Porter, who enjoy Longboat Key when they can get away from their business, Porter Family Vineyards in California's Napa Valley. The couple was attracted to the property because of its sense of seclusion and spectacular views of downtown Sarasota across the bay. "We also appreciated the layout of the home, with its prominent great room and four bedroom suites separated from each other.... It's very convenient for company," notes Beverly Porter. After purchasing the home in 2003, she and her husband completely renovated it with the assistance of Sarasota interior designer John Hargreaves. "We tried to find a look that would blend the existing structure with a direction more compatible with the Porters' tastes," explains Hargreaves. The result is a French Country motif layered with more formal appointments.

Underfoot in the impressive foyer is a distinctive musically-oriented intarsia, a mosaic created from nine different colors of pressure-cut marble, inlaid into a tile floor. The gracious couple, who love to entertain, agree on their favorite room in the house, although Townsend's enthusiasm is particularly palpable. "I love the great room, partly because of its magnificent wine cabinet," explains the California vintner, who describes with pride how it was custom-built from black walnut cut from a single tree. The 25-foot-long, temperature-controlled unit accommodates more than 1,500 bottles.

Hargreaves notes, "Because of the scale of the room, we had to think in terms of very large pieces."

Five crystal chandeliers with amethyst accents illuminate this elegant space and are on winches for easy cleaning. The room's formidable limestone fireplace was handcrafted in Mexico to Hargreaves' specifications, while a prominent tapestry took 18 months to weave in China. "The tapestry, approximately 18 feet wide by 12 feet high, balances the color and scale of the wine cabinet.... That whole side of the room has a nice harmony to it," explains the designer. "When it went up, we didn't think it looked exactly like the sketch," recalls Townsend Porter. He and his wife then realized the mural was a mirror image of the original design. "Fortunately, I think we're the only ones who would know," he quips of the minor imperfection.

Panoramic windows provide stunning skyline views from the master bedroom. "All you see is water, giving the impression of being on a ship," says Townsend. Beverly reports the master bath is clad in hand-painted tiles and exotic green marble, while the fixtures are plated in 24-karat gold. The Porters' two grown children, Heather and Timothy, influenced their own bedroom and bathroom designs. Heather favored a French Gothic look and her bathroom features classic Gothic arches with a matching gilded mirror, while fiber-optic images of the constellations appear on its indigo ceiling.

Other flourishes include a dreamy French Country kitchen tricked out with high-end appliances and a chandelier from acclaimed Danish glass artist Ulla Darni. The meticulous attention to detail, however, is not limited to the interior. A fresco on the lanai was painted on-site by a pair of Italian artisans, and the swimming pool is lined with 150,000 glass tiles that provide a unique luminescence. "It was not an easy decision to sell this home," admits Beverly Porter, who explains the couple will probably downsize to a condo on Sarasota Bay. "We put so much of ourselves into it," she says.

HOME ALONE

HOUSE FOR SALE

BY CAMILLA McLAUGHLIN

Don't be surprised if this Winnetka, Ill., property looks familiar. As the setting for the movie "Home Alone," it is one of the most recognized houses in America, one that is apt to pop into many minds at the mention of the word "home."

That's one of the reasons why filmmaker John Hughes picked this residence and it's also one of the qualities that make it so special. Framed by lawns and gardens and shaded by stately oaks, this red brick Colonial Georgian is the quintessential family home.

With living and dining rooms flanking the entry, the interior might follow the traditional layout, but there is nothing stodgy or dated about this design. Instead, the overall impression, flooded with light and rooms that transition effortlessly from one to another, is timeless and open.

IN ADDITION TO ITS FILM NOTORIETY, THIS WINNETKA, ILL., PROPERTY OFFERS THE RARE COMBINATION OF SUBURBAN LIVING AND WALKABILITY.

"I was really struck by its classical architectural lines. The house has wonderful proportions and balance to it. Functionality is something we appreciated about the house. It has distinct zones, so people can have their privacy," observes owner John Abendshien.

"We fell in love with the bones of this house the moment we walked in. We like to have a variety of uses but we don't want to go into a lot of cubbyholes. In this house, we have a lot of corners with different uses but it all opens up. That gives us connection with each other but we also have little niches for each one of us. Everyone has their space," says owner Cynthia Abendshien.

second floor's entire west wing. During the filming of the movie, the family camped out here, according to the Abendshiens. The second floor also includes two additional bedrooms and a large playroom. And there is a third-floor bedroom retreat.

The home's location is also significant, according to Marissa Hopkins, who is listing the property for Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in Highland Park, Ill., for $1.95 million. Suburban homes aren't typically thought of as "walkable" from a location standpoint, but this home is literally minutes from everything, including the Metra train station, shops and dining.

"I love the fact that I only have to walk a short distance down Lincoln Avenue to see the town center ahead of me. The house's location is perfect. I can walk to the post office, grocery store, train station, everything. The fact that Winnetka is full of parks is something we quickly came to appreciate after we moved to the North Shore," observes Cynthia. From this house, the village beach, park and Lake Michigan are only two blocks away.

Still, the well-conceived interior is not without a few surprises, such as the Sydney Barton hand-painted dining room walls that illustrate an English garden or an unexpected greenhouse window overlooking the gardens and an outdoor greenhouse. In fact, banks of windows and French doors make outside views part of every room and yet each, according to Cynthia, is unique to that space.

As magnificent as this residence is, one of the most valuable aspects, according to Cynthia, is the neighborhood. "We have a sense of community on this street that I value tremendously. It's like neighborhoods used to be. There is a sense of fun and friendship here that none of us take for granted."

"We both like sun and even on a winter day the house lights up. You don't feel confined and you always have a nice amount of sunlight wherever you happen to be in the house," says John.

HAWAIIAN HIDEAWAY

A BRIGHT BEACH HOME ON OAHU OFFERS A RARE OPPORTUNITY FOR LUXURY BUYERS.

BY JENNIFER MARTIN

Travelers know of Diamond Head, a darkened volcanic crater more than 3,500 feet above Oahu, as a place for hiking and for taking in the panoramic views of Honolulu and Waikiki. But this ancient site isn't appreciated just for its rugged beauty. At its base is an expansive circle of luxury homes that represent some of the finest living on the Hawaiian Islands.

Luxury homes start at $2.5 million and are not hard to find on the "cone" side of the crater. But it's a different story on the "beach" side, overlooking the Pacific Ocean. Those properties tend to be passed from parents to children, and they don't come up for sale often. A home at 3939 Kahala Avenue has become an exception to the rule, however, offering buyers an exceptional investment opportunity.

"The feature that is always awe-inspiring is the private rooftop deck, with views of the Pacific Ocean," says Realtor Lisa Haeringer, of Coldwell Banker Pacific Properties. "In the early evening, it's a favorite spot for watching the sky change colors and waves roll in. And it's perched above the neighboring homes, so it's very private."

Haeringer has a depth of knowledge about home design, and not just as an award-winning Realtor: she built three luxury homes on the beach side of Diamond Head, where she has lived for 30 years. She considers the $3.399 million home at 3939 Kahala Avenue something special.

"Architecturally, this house is very interesting," she says, citing a sky-domed, two-story entryway with stone flooring, Hawaiian-inspired coffered ceilings, Eucalyptus floors in the living and dining rooms and artwork niches throughout the residence. "People admire the 'luxury plantation' feeling of the entry and gardens, and the copper decorative entry doors."

Originally built in 1988, the home was renovated in 2009 to include open, airy interiors. Rooms flow into each other gracefully, and the high ceilings and grand windows seem to invite the sky and sea into the home. The two main bedrooms — one on the second floor, one on the ground — both open to lanais.

"Some think the home has a Mediterranean feel, others say its lines are modern, yet all agree there's an 'island' ambiance," Haeringer says.

The home lies on the slopes of Diamond Head, with a steady flow of island breezes. It's also conveniently located near parks, family beaches, surf areas and even a farmer's market. Downtown Honolulu is an easy drive.

This property has one of the largest pools in Diamond Head, a lap pool adjoining a covered entertaining area. This space features its own bar service island, with dishwasher and refrigerator. The home's lower level includes a family/media room and an additional bedroom/game room off the pool. "This home has ample space to entertain large groups of friends," Haeringer says. "Yet it's warm and inviting, and feels like your own private resort, with plenty of places for solitude. It's the best of both worlds."

represents the best of Hillsborough, California's
past and present.*

BY ROGER GRODY

Hillsborough, located 17 miles south of San Francisco, is one of the most affluent communities in the nation and home to a distinctive, historic inventory of high-end real estate rarely found in suburbia. There is no better reflection of Hillsborough's luxury market than the landmark Newhall Manor, a 10,500-square-foot Tudor-style estate built in 1897. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage's Peggy LeDoux, the listing agent, reports this property is a rare combination of historic character and modern amenities.

Occupying 1.28 acres, the home was one of the original "Burlingame Cottages" built to complement the neighboring Burlingame Country Club. It was designed by A. Page Brown, one of the most influential California architects of the era, whose commissions included San Francisco's landmark Ferry Building and the city's Trinity Episcopal Church. Last year, Newhall Manor was featured in a historic homes tour during Hillsborough's Centennial celebration, along with the Bing Crosby Estate and La Dolphine, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Driving through the front gate, guests pass a redwood grove that shades an expansive lot accommodating a pool, basketball court and four-car garage. A rose garden, herringbone pattern brick terrace and meandering nature trails enhance a tranquil indoor-outdoor lifestyle. Upon entering the home, visitors find themselves in a grand art-filled foyer with decoratively inlaid hardwood flooring, a feature that reappears throughout the home. A cubbyhole on one side of the entryway — originally designed as a butler's waiting station — represents the kind of architectural detail that has survived multiple renovations. In a formal dining room with impressive crystal chandeliers and matching sconces, views of the grounds are shown off through French doors. A magnificent ballroom was added by owner Samuel Finley Brown Morse, the developer of Pebble Beach Golf Course.

Among Newhall Manor's other prominent owners was Caspar Weinberger, President Reagan's

Secretary of Defense, reports LeDoux. His study, a library lined with rich wood bookshelves, was modeled after his office in Washington, D.C. A pull-down screen, still present in an art-lined hallway adjacent to the library, was used to debrief dignitaries arriving at this de facto West Coast branch of the Department of Defense. "The current owners purchased the house in 1998 when their children were young and renovated the property from the foundation to the roof," explains LeDoux. She predicts another family with children will end up buying it, enticed by Hillsborough's award-winning schools, the size of the property and its proximity to shops and restaurants. The town itself is a major draw, according to LeDoux, who notes, "Hillsborough has a great sense of community — residents feel like they belong to something."

When they remodeled the estate in 1998-99, the current owners expanded the kitchen into a sprawling showcase with white oak nine-panel cabinets, caramel-colored granite countertops, a checkerboard travertine floor, gourmet Viking and Sub-Zero appliances, walk-in pantry and a temperature-controlled wine room. An office with four computer stations also has been integrated into this hub of activity and creativity, and adjacent to the kitchen is a cozy family room with one of the home's five fireplaces.

Upstairs lies a sprawling master suite with a marble fireplace, decked-out walk-in closet and a luxurious marble-clad bathroom with all the bells and whistles. A terrace and sunroom make this residential floor a welcome retreat. A third level equipped with a European kitchen and bathroom originally served as the servants' quarters, but has been converted into a family fun center. Former bedrooms are now used as a gym, screening room and game room, respectively — and a fourth room is currently dedicated to doll houses!

The property's $5.99 million price tag appears relatively moderate amidst the stratospheric prices often seen in Hillsborough, reflected by a 38,000-plus estate currently listed at $43.888 million. "Given the historical and architectural interest in Newhall Manor, as well as the size of the home and its lot, it is competitively priced," maintains LeDoux.

SKY'S THE LIMIT

RELATED COMPANIES BRINGS FIVE-STAR LUXURY
CONDOS TO LOS ANGELES

By JENNIFER MARTIN

"The Century will bring a new way of living to Los Angeles"
— Robert A.M. Stern, Architect

Panoramic view of the Pacific

The Century Residences

The Porte-Cochère

The Pool

The Century, designed by world-renowned Robert A.M. Stern Architects, was completed in 2010 and is located in the heart of Century City, within walking distance to fine restaurants, world-class shopping, renowned golf courses, and is adjacent to Beverly Hills. "The Century will bring a new way of living to Los Angeles," said Robert A.M. Stern. The architect behind the iconic 42 story, elliptical shaped tower explains, "By curving the edge you get the most dramatic, panoramic views of the Pacific to the west and the mountains to the east."

Hollywood luminary, Candy Spelling, who purchased the penthouse duplex at The Century, is among the local and international purchasers who have been attracted to the tower's light-filled condominium residences.

"Related Companies has built a masterpiece of a tower with five-star amenities, while bringing an unprecedented lifestyle to Los Angeles," said Realtor Linda May, of Linda May Properties. "It is an amazing opportunity in a premier location with unparalleled views."

The Century, set upon four acres of lush gardens features a grand lobby that welcomes owners and guests as they drive past the private gatehouse and arrive at a towering glass canopy porte-cochère. Amenities include a fitness center with a fitness concierge, state-of-the-art equipment, a Pilates studio and spa treatment room, a 75-foot swimming pool with landscaped terrace and furnished cabanas, a children's play area, business center and private wine storage.

Residents can also reserve private rooms for entertaining, such as the Assouline Culture Lounge, a library named for France's leading publisher, a private screening room, dining room with catering kitchen and outdoor dining with fireplaces and lounge seating. "Residents may enjoy cocktails in the bar lounge with their guests while overlooking the gardens before viewing the Academy Awards or Super Bowl in the Sony designed screening room," said Mary Ann Osborn, director of sales for Related Companies.

The stunning residences, each with its own private elevator vestibule, offer the best in luxury living. Great rooms feature fireplaces, floor-to-ceiling windows and generous balconies. Spa-inspired master baths are appointed with 72-inch Whirlpool soaking tubs, marble or onyx vanity tops and marble walls and floors. Three interior design aesthetics are offered; two of which are designed by Stern, and one by West Coast Architectural Digest Magazine favorite, Marmol Radziner and Associates.

"There's a gracefulness and spaciousness that seems to permeate each residence," Linda May said. "They're warm and inviting, yet strikingly sophisticated."

Privacy and a privileged lifestyle are provided by Related's precision-trained staff, available 24 hours a day to cater to residents' every need including valet parking and personal assistant services.

Related Companies is the nation's most acclaimed privately held real estate development firm. Its 40 year history and distinguished portfolio of luxury properties are well known and include New York's iconic Time Warner Center crowned by the Residences at Mandarin Oriental and One Central Park Condominiums, The Chatham and Superior Ink Condominiums in New York, The Clarendon in Boston and many more. "Every conceivable detail was carefully thought out and flawlessly executed," Linda May said. "The Century has brought vertical living to new heights in Los Angeles."
