LUXURY LIVING WORLDWIDE EDITION 4

A SPECIAL ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT TO THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

The Wall Street Journal news organization was not involved in the creation of this content

LIVING ART

Austrian writer Ernst Fischer once said, “I don’t want life to imitate art. I want life to be art.” It’s a highly aspirational quest — but one I know many of our readers and affluent clients have embraced for their lives. Everyone has different views of what constitutes art. Perhaps it’s a Picasso painting. Perhaps it’s your favorite car. Perhaps it’s a window framing an ocean view. Regardless of your personal definitions, the goal is to see the world in a new way and to find inspiration in the beautiful things around you.

For this issue, we found our creative muses in the events and celebrations surrounding Miami’s preeminent show, Art Basel. We spoke to iconic luxury brands with strong ties to the art world. For example, BMW partners up with Art Basel to offer artists an opportunity to undertake a journey of creative discovery for their global initiative, BMW Art Journey. The German luxury automaker also serves as event sponsor for VIP transportation, shuttling VIPs in BMWs, and will present its BMW ART Car during Art Basel. Austrian crystal-cutting company Swarovski also has a tradition of championing artistic talents at Art Basel.

Like these visionary brands, Coldwell Banker® and the Coldwell Banker Previews International® luxury marketing program believe in giving artists a platform to express themselves. That is why we are proud to sponsor the Bass Museum of Art’s bassX project, which will feature an exhibition by Swiss contemporary pop artist Sylvie Fleury during Miami Art Week. We see it as yet another way of not just supporting art, but living art.

The thousands of fine homes we represent around the globe are not just shelter, but works of art that have been thoughtfully initiated and cultivated by our clients. From the $149 million Palazzo di Amore in Beverly Hills to the $8.9 million condo on Miami’s ultra-private Fisher Island (our cover property), we are honored to market these exclusive properties and expose them to an international audience through the stories in this magazine. We hope to put you one step closer to your personal vision of art for your life.

WORK of ART

By Dresden Scott

Three miles off the shore of mainland Miami, a tiny sliver of land measuring only 0.3 square miles holds the promise of ocean views and absolute exclusivity. Fisher Island, as this private and privileged outpost is called, is accessible only by private boat, ferry — or private helicopter, if you're so inclined — and closely guarded by a 24-hour security force. Even residents must provide a password to allow visitors onto the island.

Fisher Island has perfected the art of seclusion over the decades. The swanky sanctuary took its name from automotive parts pioneer and beach real estate developer Carl G. Fisher, who once owned it. It was once the one-family island home of the Vanderbilts and later several other millionaires, until it was sold for development in the 1960s. Even then, the island's tendency toward seclusion meant that it sat vacant for nearly two decades before development could begin for very limited and restrictive multifamily use.

Palazzo del Mare was one such development that saw the bright light of a Miami day. Built in 2007, the regal 26-residence mid-rise quite literally lives up to its name, “Sea Palace,” with its grand Spanish-style architecture, uninterrupted ocean panoramas and five-star building amenities. It is one of Fisher Island’s most sought-after addresses, according to Jill Eber and Jill Hertzberg of The Jills®, Coldwell Banker’s No. 1 real estate team.

“Palazzo del Mare was built with the goal of offering the highest level of privacy and service, and has long attracted celebrities, high-profile figures and even royalty,” says Eber, who also happens to live on Fisher Island. “It’s not only quiet and stunningly beautiful, but it also has everything a discriminating buyer could possibly want. Residents of Palazzo del Mare have a dedicated full-time concierge service, heated swimming pool, state-of-the-art fitness center, media room, stunning air-conditioned lobby and many more amenities.”

Eber and Hertzberg have recently listed a desirable corner residence at Palazzo del Mare: a 3,690-square-foot “work of art,” as they call it. In typical Fisher Island fashion, the impeccably decorated home is accessed via private key elevator for an extra layer of privacy. Inside, the palace in the sky beckons with five bedrooms, four-and-a-half bathrooms and an array of stunning finishes designed to evoke a sense of modernity. Exquisite porcelain floors, backlit walls of magnificent onyx, an open living room, a dining area and a custom media room impress against the magnificent backdrop of views spanning the Atlantic, Cruise Ship Alley, South Beach, downtown Miami and the golf course. Motorized electric shades throughout the home offer the opportunity to let in light and views during the day through the expansive balconies. The chef’s kitchen sports top-of-the-line Miele, Gaggenau and Sub-Zero appliances, blue granite counter tops, a custom glass divider wall and a private breakfast area overlooking the sea. The master suite offers a soothing retreat, with a step-out balcony and spacious marble master bath with spa tub and glass rain shower. A balcony with open seating areas faces northeast, providing mesmerizing views over Government Cut to take in the parade of ships and incredible sunrises over the Atlantic Ocean and sunsets to the west.

“It’s one of those rare and breathtaking properties that embodies the Fisher Island lifestyle,” says Hertzberg. “You can sit and watch the sunrise or sunset, all from your own balcony.”

Beyond that, the future owner of this residence will enjoy all of the new amenities on Fisher Island, including a beach club, spa, gourmet market, golf course, tennis, two deep-water marinas, the Vanderbilt Mansion and world-class restaurants like Porto Cervo and Garwood Lounge. And for a place that prides itself on seclusion, it’s still just a short distance from the excitement of Miami Beach and downtown Miami. ♦

AROUND THE WORLD IN 40 DAYS

By Jaymi Naciri

BMW ART JOURNEY GIVES EMERGING ARTISTS A GLOBAL PLATFORM.

It's the rural, minimally populated department of Cantal, a region of Auvergne in south-central France, and Hong Kong artist Samson Young is being hung by his feet from the structure surrounding a historic bell. But this is no medieval torture technique; it's part of Young's BMW Art Journey — a joint initiative with Art Basel — as its inaugural recipient.

Jeff Koons, BMW Art Car #17 (M3 GT2), 2010

1. THE ARTIST
PROPOSES
THE JOURNEY.
2. THE ARTIST
SETS OFF ON THE JOURNEY.
3. THE ARTIST
REFLECTS ON THE JOURNEY.

Alexander Calder
1st BMW Art Car #1
(3.0 CSL), 1975

Young's proposal to document iconic bells throughout the world and translate the experience into art led him on a journey that spanned five continents. In Fez, Morocco, he visited a silenced and transformed bell (it's now a chandelier at a mosque) that had its tongue removed to symbolize Islam triumphing over Christianity. In St. Petersburg, he took an after-hours tour of the Hermitage Museum to view Catherine the Great's Peacock Clock and be able to listen to it chime exclusively.

And in Cantal, with help from local historians and guides, he was able to locate a bell almost no one was certain existed, and prove a piece of folklore fact. The bell in question was said to be magic — some reportedly had believed it could chase away thunderstorms, others swore it initiated them — and his acrobatics provided confirmation for the former.

"Samson spent three days in the middle of France doing research on bells in remote villages," says Dr. Thomas Girst, BMW's head of cultural engagement, who accompanied Young on this part of the trip. "I held his ankles so he could slide under the bell. On the other side, he found an inscription saying the bell was there to keep thunder away. And that was just one of many examples of the awe-inspiring events that happen on the journeys."

The works that Young has created will be showcased at this month's Art Basel in Miami at the same time the newest recipient of the BMW Art Journey is being chosen.

MORE THAN SPONSORSHIP

The idea behind the Art Journey is to take BMW's long-held commitment to cultural initiatives from sponsor to collaborator.

"BMW has been involved with the arts for a half-century with hundreds of international engagements, mostly having to do with long-term partnerships, museums, opera houses, modern and contemporary art, classical music and jazz, and architecture. Those are the pillars of our cultural positioning of the BMW brand," said Girst. "With the Art Journey, we never think of it as sponsorship but more of a partnership, an interaction more than a transaction. It's not just about throwing money at an artist for a prize. We are striving to do something meaningful that can resonate and that assists young artists in getting their visions realized to their full creative potential."

DON'T CALL IT AN AWARD

In fact, so intent is BMW on fostering emerging artists, it has all but banned the word "award." Instead, the BMW Art Journey is a "journey of creative discovery," a "stipend," or an "endeavor."

"It's not doing justice to the journey by calling it an award, which is so heavily associated with money," said Girst. "The Art Journey is a means for the artists to take a breather. To be able to leave their studio and discover the world, with destinations of their own choosing, to encounter different people, enter into dialogues, be able to delve into what's truly of interest to them, and get inspired, without any restrictions."

Specifically, the Art Journey provides artists — one from Art Basel Hong Kong and one from Art Basel Miami each year — the opportunity to take a creative idea and make it reality. The only stipulations: the journey should take between two weeks and two months and "can take place almost anywhere on this planet," said Girst. "The artist is free to roam the globe as he or she pleases."

MAKING THE SELECTION

The selection process for the next artist to embark on this endeavor is already well underway, with galleries having applied to be showcased in the Positions sector in Miami (the Discoveries sector is the base for Hong Kong) at Art Basel and artists selected by committee. Internationally renowned museum directors and curators will shortlist three artists, who are announced during the fair. The Journeyer then sends in a proposal, after which a final choice is made.

"They then have a month or two to complete the proposal detailing their ideal journey," said Girst. "Samson included an entire itinerary, with dozens of places to go and see all over the world and a clear vision for how his endeavor would help shape his project. We were amazed by the scope of his vision, his relentless research, and his awareness of discourses going on in different countries."

It's that level of creative exploration that shapes the Art Journey and connects it to the BMW brand ideal.

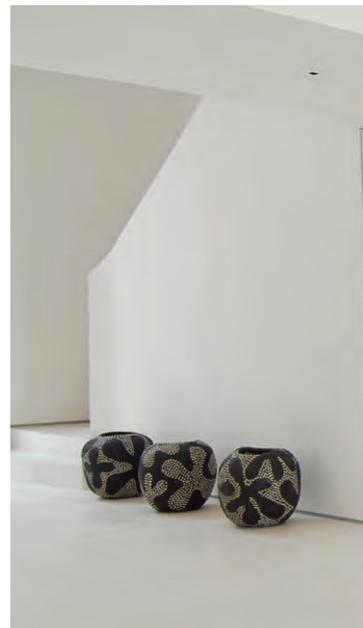

"The only way in which a company can thrive is through creative freedom," said Girst. "We would never dare to intrude upon an artist's freedom. Our engineers and designers need that exact same freedom that we honor with our cultural commitments worldwide."

EVERYTHING IS ILLUMINATED

By Alyson Pitarre

As Miami fires up for another Art Basel, designer Juan Carlos Arcila-Duque shares his greatest sources of inspiration.

Photography
Interiors: Dora Franco
Portrait: Troy Campbell

"The light," proclaims Juan Carlos Arcila-Duque in a melodious Colombian accent that has never quite disappeared, despite his more than two decades in the United States. "It makes you want to create, to move, to go outside and experience the rich color and multicultural vibe of the city."

The 49-year-old interior designer is, of course, talking about the crisp, clean light of Miami, a place he has called home for the last 14 years. It has served as his muse in many ways, like the great Impressionists sought to capture different moments of time, weather and mood. His canvases are his clients' private residences — "Bohemian, modernist and full of memories," he describes. He even approaches his projects like an artist, waiting for inspiration to strike, saying, "I like the house to talk to me." Art is never far from his eye. An avid collector of photography, Arcila-Duque has served as the co-chair of the Junior Host Committee for Art Basel Miami since its inception in 2002.

We recently caught up with the global designer to ask him about Miami's explosive art scene and why it's one of the most inspirational design cities in the world.

WHAT DO YOU LOVE MOST ABOUT DESIGNING IN MIAMI?

What I appreciate about Miami — and really, the opportunity in general that I had to live in this country — is the sense of community. I am a self-taught designer, and I came here with nothing. When I first came to America, I originally settled in New York City, which was like the university of my life! The city taught me structure and organization. But everyone is so stressed. Here in Miami, how can you be stressed when you have the beautiful ocean to look at all day? I tell my clients who are stressed about this or that, "Take a look at your view. Relax." In design, you have to be a friend, psychologist, confidante. Relationships develop over time, even in a place like Miami where people may come and go with time. But many people — like me — stay and make their lives here. I've carved out a space in this city.

ONE OF THE "COMMUNITIES" YOU'VE BEEN INVOLVED IN FOR YEARS IS THE JUNIOR HOST COMMITTEE FOR ART BASEL MIAMI. IS THAT YOUR IDEA OF GIVING BACK?

Our goal is to inspire the younger generations of collectors. I think by having young collectors, we are helping to grow a young community of artists. We are saying to people: "Not everyone has to go to New York in order to make it." We need to encourage these collectors and museums to buy art from these artists, so they stay in the city and don't starve to death!

HOW ELSE ARE YOU INVOLVED WITH THE LOCAL ART SCENE?

I've been involved in many boards and museums over the years. I owned a design and photography gallery and was a pioneer of photography in the design district, where I brought big shows from Horst P. Horst, Peter Beard, Araki, Helmut Newton and many other well-known artists, as well as the young and local artists that no one will support. I help them to secure a career. I'm proud of that. And I do continually attend fairs around the world. There is a mix of art and design that keeps me going.

HOW DO YOU TYPICALLY DESIGN A SPACE WITH ART?

Many of the houses, apartments and commercial spaces that I design already come furnished with art from my clients' own collections. Whether these pieces are valuable or not to my eye, it does not matter. They are valuable to my clients' eye. So I usually design around those pieces or elements. I will find a piece that complements something they already own.

To find the right art pieces for clients, it's an investment for them, because they will live in their house for many years. I encourage them to make that investment in a responsible way. I have a large collection of photography and some knowledge of art, and I can help advise them. When I incorporate art pieces in houses, I am very serious about it. It takes a lot of time.

I will mix art that costs $2,000 or $70,000 — or even millions. It's not about the price. The piece must be right.

WHY DO YOU THINK MIAMI IS SUCH A HOTBED FOR ART, DESIGN AND ARCHITECTURE?

New York doesn't have anywhere to grow. It's growing up, not out. Miami has the space. It's sunny all year round. And I also think the city's multiculturalism has made it an inspiring place to live for many people. It's not just Latinos and New Yorkers coming here anymore. It's a truly global city.

WHERE DO YOU SEE MIAMI DESIGN GOING IN THE FUTURE?

Miami is going to expand north. The new South Beach is going to be on the Surfside and Bal Harbor. South Beach is fun, but congested. All the top new luxury housing developments are going north of Miami Beach — the 18-story Faena House condominium tower, where Miami's most expensive penthouse sold in Miami this year, the Fendi Residence, the Four Seasons, Edition, Armani, Porsche Towers and the St. Regis are going to head north. Bal Harbor is going to be the new thing. There are more architects building in Miami than in Dubai 10 years ago, when I worked on a couple of projects. The new Wynwood Arts District will be huge. It's a new generation of Miami.

STROKE OF BRILLIANCE

Nadja Swarovski shares her company's hottest Design Miami/ collaboration yet.

The crystal has a history of commanding both fascination and awe. No one knew that better than Daniel Swarovski, who founded his crystal-cutting company in Austria in 1895. His vision was simple yet clear: the crystal is not merely a material, but an inspiration. Now, more than 120 years later, his great-great-granddaughter Nadja Swarovski has expanded the family business from jewelry and evening bags to the high art and design worlds.

The brand's latest Design Miami/ installation, on display from Dec. 2 to Dec. 6, 2015, during Art Basel, just might be the brightest star yet (quite literally) to hit Miami Beach. Entitled El Sol, the installation was designed by Mexico City-based Fernando Romero Enterprise (FR-EE) and explores humanity's relationship with the sun through a vast geodesic structure composed of Swarovski crystals. We recently spoke to Swarovski about El Sol and her company's commitment to self-expression through the arts.

YOU ARE CELEBRATING 10 YEARS OF PARTNERSHIP WITH DESIGN MIAMI/ THIS YEAR. WHAT HAS YOUR INVOLVEMENT MEANT TO YOUR BRAND OVER THE YEARS?

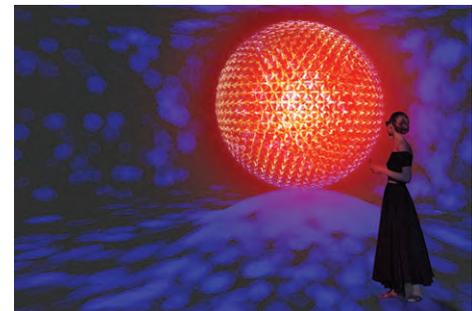

We are delighted to celebrate a decade of partnership with Design Miami/ this year. Miami is a premier destination to showcase and highlight some of the world's best art, architects and artists. Design Miami/ in particular has the right global audience and allows us to showcase our design partner and brand internationally. In the past decade, Design Miami/ has grown into a showcase of creativity and commerce. We have been privileged to collaborate with some extraordinary talents, including Ross Lovegrove, Greg Lynn, Troika, Fredrikson Stallard, Asif Khan, Guilherme Torres, Jeanne Gang and James Balog.

LET'S TALK ABOUT EL SOL. WHY DID YOU CHOOSE TO WORK WITH FR-EE?

The partnership between Swarovski and FR-EE happened very organically. We have admired their work for some time, and when the team recently visited our headquarters in the Austrian Alps, it was clear that they had a very intellectual approach and a deep appreciation of crystal as a creative medium.

WHAT WAS THE BIGGEST CHALLENGE FERNANDO ROMERO AND HIS TEAM FACED DURING THE CREATION OF EL SOL?

Fernando and his team were challenged with the intricate mathematics of creating a vast geodesic structure constructed from 2,880 custom-made precision-cut Swarovski crystals, which augment and refract the light emitted from LEDs within the installation's core. The resulting piece is visually stunning and technically remarkable. The project was truly challenging for our product development team. It took more than 350 hours of engineering to create the special pyramid-shaped crystal and to construct El Sol! Its scale is one billion times smaller than the sun, but the magnitude of the piece is awe-inspiring.

AS A LUXURY BRAND, WHAT HAS BEEN THE MOST SIGNIFICANT ADVANTAGE TO YOUR LONGSTANDING DESIGN MIAMI/ PRESENCE?

Swarovski has collaborated with creative partners throughout our 120-year history, giving them free reign to experiment and any technical support they require. Design Miami/ provides designers with the opportunity to collaborate with a brand on cutting-edge projects while exploring new materials and opening new artistic horizons. That is why we were especially pleased to partner with Design Miami/ Basel earlier this year on the Designers of the Future award, which acknowledges emerging studios and designers who are expanding design culture through experimentation with cutting-edge technologies. It's an honor to be able to support a new generation and contribute to the wider design conversations.

1. ANGULUS RUG BY LINDSTROM RUGS

Erik Lindstrom of Lindstrom Rugs is debuting Korgamy, his most recently completed collaborative collection with famed designer Karim Rashid, at Miami showroom Ed'it during Art Basel. As part of that collection, Angulus pays homage to cubism and origami structures using complex triangulations and a complementary color palette. Hand-tufted in New Zealand wool and available in both a colored and a neutral version, the rug comes in custom sizes, materials and colors.

From $83 to $180 per square foot. lindstromrugs.com

2. KELLY CLUSTER BY STUDIO ITALIA DESIGN

Merry and bright. Studio Italia Design's Kelly Cluster pendants are a brilliant addition to any modern space. This collection combines the small Kelly LED sphere in clusters ranging from one to 36 spheres in a single canopy. Each 7-inch-diameter sphere is powered by an 8.7-watt LED module, creating one unique lighting effect.

From $790. sid-usa.com

3. PAMPALONI STILE SILVER JUG

Masterfully hand-crafted in silver, this sleek Pampaloni wine jug and its sharp, post-modern motifs are the perfect accent to a New Year's Eve table trending toward the future. Made in Italy, the jug measures 20 cm x 24 cm x 20 cm.

$1,960. artemest.com

4. STRADERA DESK BY FRANCO ALBINI

Perfect for the intellectual, this writing desk by Franco Albinì is composed of two trapezoidal-shaped surfaces — a main and a side top — of two different depths, supported by a single steel base painted matte black. Opt for Canaletto walnut, natural or stained black ashwood surfaces if your recipient loves the look of wood; if she is the more daring type, there are also natural cement and white Carrara marble versions.

From $3,480. Available at Cassina Soho, 151 Wooster, New York, NY. 212-228-8186 or cassina.com.

5. ORIGAMI BOXES BY KELLY WEARSTLER

Inspired by origami and hand-carved out of white Calacatta and Negro Marquina marble, these artful, geometric boxes keep jewels or paper clips discreetly and expertly organized. Available in a small and mini size, together they are a graphic, bold and elegant addition to any vanity or desk.

$495 for the mini and $550 for the small size. kellywearstler.com

6. ROUNDOUT BY HUDSON VALLEY LIGHTING

Interlocking cubes in textured black and metallic create just the right amount of tension in this Hudson Valley Lighting pendant inspired by the Atomic Age. The modern-style brass lighting cluster comes in four sizes with mixed finishes, and two clean, cube pendant designs in aged brass or polished nickel finish — an ideal choice to hang over your holiday dinner table.
